

HALFWAYS

We used to listen to the snowfall
And count the colours of the sunrise
We used to sieve the streams for answers
We used to think things out to madness
But now we don't need that much
Maybe now we don't care that much
We used to say "it's all or nothing"
And now we settle for the halfways

Why? I don't know why
Why heaven's cheaper than it was when I was young
And where is all the hunger

Now you see it, now you don't
Now it's a dream, now it's not
You just grab it while you can
No matter if it makes no sense
Cause we no longer raise our voices
We don't say yes but we neither object
And in our fear of losing balance
We can't tell the shadow from the darkness

Why? I don't know why
Why heaven's cheaper than it was when I was young
And where is all the hunger

This tacit silence
The bowed heads
The things we said we'd never put up for sale
A boat abandoned
Deep in dry land
Hard to believe that there a river once flowed by

Cause I don't know why
Why heaven's cheaper than it was when I was young
And where is all the hunger
